

March 13, 2018

Press Release:

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Riverview Takes Awards at National History Day Competition

On Sunday, March 11, 2018, 82 Riverview students competed against students from 15 area high schools in the annual National History Day competition at the Senator John Heinz History Center. The annual competition invites students to complete projects in one of five different categories (historical papers, exhibits, performances, documentaries, and websites) that relate to a historical theme. The 2018 theme for the competition is Conflict and Compromise in History. Riverview had 16 students (6 different projects) place at the regional competition and will take their projects to compete at the State Finals on May 11 and 12, 2018 in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. The students who placed at the competition are listed below.

Nathaniel Black, William Franciscus, Francesca Lio, and Jake Shoop - First Place Group Documentary entitled Ireland: A Country in Conflict with Itself

Lauren Hornsby, Beth Shoop, and Alexio Ciorra - Second Place Group Documentary entitled Eureka! AUssies on Strike

Erik Ketterer - Second Place Historical Paper entitled The Apartheid Resistance Movement: How Nelson Mandela and Others Led to the Abolition of Apartheid in South Africa

Molly McCague and Alivia Schultheis - Second Place Group Website entitled Cuban Missile Crisis: Conflict and Compromise on the Brink of Nuclear War

Victoria Dietrich, Lauren Dugan, Alyse Johnson, Alexis Sykes, and Katie Rose Zatawski - Third Place Group Website entitled A Life in Conflict

Eugene Pronio - Third Place Historical Paper entitled Galileo: Science vs. Religion

Congratulations to all Riverview students who participated and good luck to everyone advancing to the state competition.